Champlain Coffee House (exercise derived and modified from Felke-Morris text)

The Coffee House serves snacks, coffee, tea, and soft drinks. Musical performances and poetry readings performed by students and faculty are held every Wednesday during the semester. The customers of the Champlain Coffee House are Champlain students, faculty and other members of the Champlain community. The purpose of the Web presence will be to display the services provided by the Coffee House as well as a calendar for the performances. Eventually the site will consist of various pages linked together. In this exercise you will work on a home page and a menu page. In following exercises you will modify these two pages and add a page for the schedule of music performances and forms for collecting information.

In this exercise you will create two web pages for Champlain's fictitious coffee shop. The overall layout and content of the pages are provided on this sheet.

Don't forget to include comments at the top of the each page of code, and to use appropriate and descriptive filenames.

Make sure to follow HTML5 standards with respect to case and closings on tags.

Make sure that each page has a descriptive title bar notation.

A simple wireframe for the pages is shown below. Note there are 4 areas defined for the pages.

Company Name
Navigation
Content
Footer

The Home, Menu, and Music text at the top of each page will eventually be used by viewers to jump from page to page.

Use ` ` and `
` where necessary to create extra spacing, but don't overuse either!

Use `©` for the copyright symbol at the bottom of the page.

Your email address (you will need to replace the 'yourfirstname@yourlastname.com' with your own information) at the bottom of each page will eventually allow a viewer to send you a message directly from the page.

Your pages so far will be black text on a white background. That's OK, they will be enhanced in another exercise.

Proofread your pages to make sure there are no typographical errors.

Check that all pages appear as expected in the browser of your choice.

Once completed, find a partner who has also finished their pages. Review each other's work. Is all the content on the pages? Do the pages appear correctly in the browser(s)? Are there any spelling errors? Is the code HTML5 compliant? Once both of you are satisfied, get your Champlain Coffee House pages checked off!
